Crédo: Paul Frangipane / Bloomberg / Getty Images in 2018. Protests of teachers swept the country with educators speaking against bond cuts of generalized public school and salary stagnation. These protests took strikes, including the Los Angeles teachers strike at Grand Park on January 22, 2019 in Los Angeles, California. Thousands of teachers - Parents and support students - Celebrate a relative victory When the United Los Angeles teachers unified school district of Los Angeles reached an agreement that included class sizes, providing financing for school nurses and educator pay . Although this victory was significant, it also serves as a testimony of the issues in progress, aiming the United States educational system. If the waves of demonstrators are not enough to convince you of the problems around the teacher pay (and other concerns raised by the educators), then perhaps these shocking numbers. Salário.com listed $ 44,926 as the Mission Home Salary for Public Educators on August 27, 2021. At the other end of the payment scale, US funding teachers pay US $ 71,000 Annually, while superior teaching teachers do between $ 71,000 - $ 81,000 a year in mother. Meanwhile, in Luxembourg, the largest metering salary for primary school teachers is 114,000 euros (or US $ 133,316.16) annually. Looking at things on a state basis, New York teachers leave at the top, making a median salary of $ 85,258 (via usa today) - Although New York also requires teachers to gain a master's degree in their first five years of being at work, a caveat that can create more barriers to incipient educators. Other states comparing with New York Payscale include California, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Alaska, but many others land at the opposite end of the spectrum, including Oklahoma, where "half of all teachers are [made] less than US $ 33,630 per year "in 2019. The magazine Edtech asked:" If you received a job that paid an annual medication of $ 49,000 and required that you worked from 12 to 16 hours of day, would you think? "Sounds Safe, are not you? Well, unfortunately, this is the norm for most teachers in US teachers, passed a $ 745 of their own money in classroom supplies during the 2019/29988th school year. Teachers also paid about $ 252 out of pocket on teaching materials in the distance during the spring of 2020. Michael Locisano / Getty Images To make things more frustrating, National Education Association (NEA) discovered that about 16% of teachers held seconds in summer, while 20% had secondary income during All year in 2019. Secondary school jobs are counted - coaching sports, teaching extra courses, helping with extracurricular - this figure jumps to 59%. The bottom line? Public schools should be financed properly; Teachers should be compensated á € á € - reasonably for all of them. Despite all this, education week lawmakers decreased or plan the definitive Nixed plans to raise the teacher's pay when it initially reached the pandemic. Educators were abruptly in a public health crisis on 2020 March 20. Despite the best teachers' best efforts, most schools, especially public schools, had no scripts to deal with learning scenarios All Virtual. In fact, many and other private schools with seemingly huge endowments are also equipped. Between technological roads and the fact that many students have no access to computers, tablets or the internet at home, the new coronavirus pandemic certainly triggered discrepancy and deficiencies in the American education system. Melcon / Los Angeles Times / Getty Images in August 2020, the White House formally declared essential teachers' workers, observing that they are "chronic infrastructure workers" "or, in other words, christmas for the infrastructure to reopen the country. And reinforcing the economy, however, to the contrary of other essential workers, teachers do not always have training and experience to mitigate all these public health concerns. Financing for PPE and other essential supplies and virrup combat is not always available or particularly abundant. Despite this, educators should potentially risk their health, families, and their lives to teach their students. These indisputable teachers are essential members of our communities, but also are people who, like all us, are salling the horrors of this pandemic. Often, they will be up to the call of their descriptions Working - even out of the classroom. "My students lost family members, and there are many traumators that we are not going", JA e "Essyca Mathews, an English teacher at Carman-Ainsworth High School in Flint, Michigan, counted the time." Covid beat, I had children who send me messages in the middle of the night, and I answered every time. "Mathews is not alone in his dedication to his students." My colleagues and I were stressed -
